

Electronic Theses & Dissertations at The University of Maine

<http://www.library.umaine.edu/theses/>

The Electronic Theses and Dissertations (ETD) project is a joint effort of the Graduate School and Fogler Library. The goals are:

- * Rapid dissemination of scholarship and research results
- * Development of an information infrastructure model for the University of Maine
- * Increase awareness of the value of digital libraries

These goals are in line with those of the Networked Digital Library of Theses and Dissertations (www.ndltd.org), a national initiative of which the University of Maine is a member.

ETD submission is required for students in Computer Science, Spatial Information Science and Engineering. Students in other programs are strongly encouraged to submit an electronic version of their thesis.

SUBMISSION PROCEDURES

1) Along with your final manuscript, we request that you submit an electronic file of your thesis (CD is preferred, and please make sure to test its readability).

2) Complete the back of this sheet: ETD Submission Approval Form.

If you have additional questions call 581-3222 or 581-3217.

THE ROLE OF THE RAYMOND H. FOGLER LIBRARY

The library's two roles in the management of theses and dissertations are access and preservation. Degree work completed at the University of Maine can be preserved and more widely disseminated to the scholarly community through the ETD database, which is maintained by Fogler Library, and harvested for broader access through an international ETD database.

If you have additional questions call 581-1686, or send an e-mail to: SPC@umit.maine.edu.

COPYRIGHT

Students retain copyright on their completed work, whether it is in print or digital format.

Students submitting their final thesis to the Graduate School are required to sign a library rights statement which allows the library to provide access to their work in various formats. Students who have completed a doctoral dissertation will also be required to sign an agreement with ProQuest Information and Learning/UMI that allows the company NON-EXCLUSIVE rights to sell or distribute the work.
